Are You Wearing the Right Hat?

We figure out the hat proposition about this way—

This store "hats" an increasingly large number of men each season—

The man who came last season comes again and brings his friends—

And that's all because the hat he bought was the right hat.

We put a lot of emphasis on the fact that the hat carrying with it the Bryan quality and style guarantee must be the satisfactory hat—we know it because we make it so.

Lots of stores will exchange a hat for your money, and let you walk away with headgear that's enough to ruin your reputation.

Not so here!

Suppose you begin right now wearing the right kind of hat. We have a superior line of

MOVE VOTING BOOTHS IN FORT WORTH SCHOOL ELECTION.
Fort Worth, Texas, May 7.—By moving the voting place after being advertised elsewhere, fifth ward voters are practically disfranchised in today's election here for school board. The removal was unavoidable, but there is a question whether the few votes cast can be legal. The scores going to the place advertised found it rented and went down town to their usual business, not voting.

TEACH RULES OF COURTSHIP.

Japanese Secondary Schools New Teach Regular Course.

The Japanese, quick to imitate and equally quick to originate, have added "courtship" as a special course in the girls' secondary schools of the empire. From the limited information we have secured concerning the character of the new study it might be regarded as a series of "Don't's." The Japanese girls are told that no well bred maiden will give her photographs to her admirers. If the admirers offer theirs she will refuse them. Should a maiden have the misfortune to fall in love before she is engaged, she must carefully conceal the humiliating fact and keep in mind that a proposal of marriage can never come from her—the very suggestion of such boldness being an offense to maidenly dignity. Quite likely the game of courtship as played in Japan would be voted tame ## by the girls of the western nations.

According to the Japanese rules it would seem to be a decidedly one-sided amusement. The three little maids from school, and all the other little Japanese maids, Mimosa San and her wistaria decked sisters, are expected to stand around in demure poses and wait for the condescending Nanki Pook to notice their modest existence. There is no chance for an assisted providence in the matter—not if the advice of the stern mentor of the girls' secondary schools is heeded. Surely, this would never suit the American girl. In this land of ours courtship is a sport which two must play—it isn't a game solitaire. Nor does it seem possible to make it a public study. It may be well enough to say don't do this and don't do that, but you can't base a study on warnings alone. At least you can't in free America. And that's why we are inclined to look upon the "courtship" as a subject for innocent merriment.

CONSCRIPTION IN ENGLAND.

Safety From Invasion Rests With British Navy.

In common with the other advocates of conscription, Lord Roberts has exaggerated fears of invasion. In fact, the whole case, such as it is, for compulsory service in this country rests upon the possibility of an enemy landing on our shores, says the London Chronicle. Whether invasion is possible is a naval and not a military problem. Now, notoriously the best naval opinion is against Lord Roberts' views. Given our retention of command of the sea, and the British navy will be able to deal effectively with any invading host, come it when it may. A surprise raid by a force of 70,000 to 100,000 men is conceivably possible. But, as admiral Sir John Hopkins told the Norfolk commission, such a force would be "swallowed up" in this country. Our safety from invasion depends not on a conscribed military force, but on a predominant navy. As conscription is not needed for home defence, there is no reason at all for its existence, for conscript soldiers cannot be constrained to serve abroad.

Much is often said about the physical advantages of military service. That there is much physical and moral deterioration among our urban population cannot be denied. The remedy for it is not compulsory soldiering, which might even aggravate the disease. For real amelioration we must go to the root causes. The chief of these are drink and gambling. Far more good would be done by warring against these evils than by scares about imaginary "invaders." But this is warfare in which we shall get no help from the houses of lords and the House of Commons. The army is permanently brigaded on the side of the reactionaries. Even with these allies the advocates of conscription will not prevail, for the system is utterly repugnant to British instincts.

MINERS GET WAGE INCREASE.

Fort Worth, Texas, May 7.—Practically accepting the conditions asked by the miners, the Texas & Pacific Coal company, the largest Texas operators, today submitted a proposition to the scale committee. Other operators do not concur in the proposal, but believe they will agree if the terms proposed are accepted by the miners. The terms have not been divulged, but it is said to be practically an increase of five cents as was demanded.

RIVER IS RISING ABOVE HERE AGAIN

Is Stationary at El Paso. Bank Is Being Cut Below Here.

Advices received from Engle Saturday morning by the reclamation service state that while the river is five-tenths of a foot off from the highest point of the late freshet, the gage at that point shows a slight rise of the river since Friday. The rise is probably due to renewed hot weather above.

The river at El Paso is the same that it was Thursday and Friday—15.6. A report was telephoned The Herald Friday afternoon that the river is cutting into the north bank at a point about four miles south of the courthouse and threatening to take its old bed at that point.
